

5

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mobile station dynamically adjusts its data transmission rate based on periodic load indications from a base station. The mobile station calculates a load tracking value based on two or more periodic load indications, and then calculates a rate change probability as a function of the load tracking value. The mobile station selectively 10 changes its transmission rate responsive to a current load indication based on the rate change probability.